Blood drive sets goal of record 5000 pints

Blood Drive will embark this year on what is hoped will be the world's largest blood drive. An objective of five thousand pints has been established.

This year, for the first time in history, the entire McGill family will be working together as the Graduates' Society has joined forces with the undergraduates. The undergraduate objective is 3500 while the other 1500 will come from the general public, although it is hoped the graduates will supply the majority.

The Chairman of this year's drive, Paul Yaphe, B.C.L. 2, and his vice-chairmen, Arthur Ross, Christine Fowler, Arthur Sanft, and Paul Tichauer are very enthusiastic with the response shown the Blood Drive so far. The committee has been overwhelmed with workers for all aspects of the drive. "In five years I've never seen such an outstanding response as this year", Yaphe said.

The executive committee has been hard at work the past month preparing for the drive which will open on Friday, October 23 and will run to Friday, October 30. The clinic will be open from 10 am - 6 pm, with two night clinics planned for Tuesday, October 27, and Wednesday, October 28. These clinics will be open until 9 pm.

Within the next week huge posters will be appearing all over campus. A large art committee, under the direction of Gitta Tafler has been very active the past three weeks preparing these posters. A group of fabulous prizes have been donated and these will be distributed to lucky donors.

Blood drive officials said that they felt the main problem will not be in attracting those who have donated before. "These people always return", Yaphe said. "They know how easy and safe giving blood is. Our problem has always been in convincing the freshmen that the process is safe and painless."

Anyone seventeen years of age or older is eligible to give blood. The clinic will be held in the ballroom of the union. Transportation will be available from campus to the union, and the whole process can easily be done within half an hour.

"The satisfaction of giving blood and knowing that one has contributed in saving a life is a feeling that cannot be described," Yaphe said. "I hope that 3500 students will have this feeling by the end of blood drive."

New Administrators appointed auxiliaries to Vice-Chancellor

Two senior appointments to the administrative staff of McGill University were announced today by Dr. H. Rocke Robertson, Principal and Vice-Chancellor.

George A. Grimson, University Comptroller since 1956, has been named to the new position of Executive Assistant to the Principal. In this capacity, Grimson will be concerned with the general business operation of the University and will assist the Principal in the sphere of planning and other administrative areas.

To succeed Grimson as Comptroller, the Board of Governors has approved the appointment of Allan C. McColl, C.A., who has been Comptroller of Shawinigan Chemicals Limited since 1959. McColl will take over supervision of the financial activities of the University.

Dr. Robertson said these appointments, which take effect November 2, were designed to strengthen the administrative structure of the University.

"McGill is a growing and progressive university. In the face of unprecedented physical expansion and rapidly increasing student enrolments, we must ensure that the University is properly equipped for the efficient management of its flourishing affairs. These appointments are a first step in this direction."

Grimson, an active member of the McGill C.O.T.C. prior to World War II, joined the Canadian Army in 1940, and he served first with the Machine Gun Training Centre at Three Rivers and later as a staff officer in the Directorate of Military Training, Ottawa.

McColl joined Shawinigan Chemicals Limited in 1956, serving as Chief Accountant and later as Assistant Comptroller until his appointment as Comptroller in January 1959. He had previously held responsible accounting positions with several other Montreal industries.

ATTITUDE ON SEX CLASSED AS ARCHAIC

(CUP) The Chaplain of Carleton University, Rev. Gerald Paul, well publicized two weeks ago for his attitudes on premarital sex, has criticized religions of today for their inadequacy in the modern world.

Undaunted by criticism he received after the publication of his article on extra-marital relations, he has written a second article for The Carleton in which he attacks the church for emphasizing ideas and policies which can have no appeal to the thinking youth.

"In the 20th Century we are wrapped up in the problems of the peoples of the world to such an extent that none can be saved alone. We are not saved as nations, or as communities or as individuals. We are saved in our relationships with the citizens of the world", he said.

The Carleton Chaplain believes that the policies of the old religion must be reshuffled, restated and revised if they are to have any practical use or appeal to the modern world. Talk of 'my salvation' and 'Are you saved?' is irrelevant in a world which is capable of destroying itself at any time.

The seemingly juvenile stories of the Bible have nothing to say about the problems that occupy the youth of today; the threat of nuclear war and the population explosion, "Young people are fed up with old fashioned religion", he said. "They know this is an old world — billions of years old. They know that the world took a long time to evolve and that the stars are still coming into being. They know this is a shrinking world where prejudice (religious or social) seems to be out of place."

Gung-ho

Fraternity members constitute about 10 per cent of the campus population at McGill. For them, yesterday marked the beginning of that annual orgy of mutual back-slapping known as "rushing". For us, it provides a convenient peg upon which to hang a few observations concerning the fraternity system.

The system originated in the U.S. at the end of the eighteenth century with Phi Beta Kappa, which later became an honour society. The ideal was simply the formation of a small, highly compatible group devoted to the pursuit of friendship, and to the discussion of matters of a philosophical nature — for it should be remembered that at that time many New England colleges had religious affiliations and too liberal a discussion of philosophical subjects was likely to be discouraged.

No one would pretend that fraternities have retained these as their primary goals. Now it would be more accurate to describe a fraternity as a social club, a collection of people with (hopefully) varied interests but generally very similar backgrounds, who enjoy each other's company and the convenience of eating at the "Lodge" (to use frat parlance). Often a ritual or elaborate jargon is used to induce the feeling of a bond shared by the brothers and setting them off from the unenlightened.

Such relatively closed societies have many obvious disadvantages: the inevitable inertia and conservatism that tend to foster conformity, and a "group-think" mentality that arises from the basic similarity of the members' backgrounds and from their common adherence to an ethic which tends to evaluate activities and endeavours in terms of "the good it can do the House".

The predominant fraternity stereotype remains that of a reasonably well-off but often irresponsible juvenile whose reaction to the promise and diversity of University life has been to withdraw into a tight circle of high-school or neighbourhood friends.

This, like all stereotypes, is but a caricature, but in it may be found an important element of truth. For this the fraternities must accept the blame, for they have generally refused to acknowledge any sort of responsibility to anything beyond themselves. Their only communal effort on McGill's behalf has been the Red Feather Blitz and even this has received such lukewarm support from them lately that only the participation of the women's fraternities and "outsiders" prevented an ignoble failure this year. Contrast this with the numerous incidents all year — hi-jinks, drunkenness, petty thefts, etc. which, though perhaps fun in themselves, constantly bring into disrepute the name of the University.

Nevertheless, the fraternity does serve a useful purpose: in a large university it provides the student with a nucleus of friends and a necessary locus for his initial activities. Many other organizations perform these same functions and monopolize the student to no less great an extent, this Daily being but one example. Nor can it be overlooked that from the ranks of the fraternities are recruited many of those most active in every type of student activity.

Much criticism has been directed against the discrimination, incongruous in the university context, which is inherent in the fraternity's small, invited membership. But again it should be remarked that steps have been taken to make it possible for anyone who so desires to go through rushing, if not actually to join.

The bad features of the fraternity system are simply a result of abuses or of unrealized potential. When the fraternity instead of broadening the student's range of friends and area of experience, as it was intended to do, exercises a radically limiting function, then it does a disservice to its own ideals, to its members, and to the University.

From the Ivory Tower:

The Case for a Postgraduate Home

The need for the acquisition or construction of a postgraduate students' home is not new—it is, in fact, becoming more urgent each year. In the last two years, the number of students registered in McGill's Faculty for Graduate Studies and Research has tripled to 1500. The number is expected to increase till it reaches nearly 20 per cent of the total student body. This gradual increase is also apparent in other universities, and results from the need for yet further education due to advancing technology and knowledge, as well as from increasing professional competition.

Ph. D. and Master's degree graduates are needed to fill the numerous new teaching posts that are becoming available with growing university enrollment. One criterion for judging the worth of a university—the extent and quality of its research, which is performed largely within the scope of postgraduate thesis work—is becoming increasingly important.

The Graduate Faculty has the physical dimensions of the University itself. Postgraduate students work in every building but are often completely isolated from postgrads pursuing a different field of study in other buildings. Research is not compatible with regular office hours and many experiments are carried on for days with students coming in at all hours to take readings or to check equipment. This can lead to a narrowing of interests at a time when a more relaxed and creative atmosphere should exist.

The greatest need for a home comes from the necessity for postgraduate students to meet often and informally at a well-known, well frequented centre. It is the purpose of the Trust Fund, set up by the PGSS in 1961 under the guidance of Dr. D. L. Thomson, to help set up such a home.

The fact that postgraduates are different from undergraduates in age, outlook and in their academic and extracurricular activities, is well known. They are generally older than students in faculties such as Medicine and Law. Added to this is the fact that they are no longer part of a class with coursework and aims. Each has his own specific thesis project and is very much on his own. As a teaching assistant or demonstrator the postgraduate student frequently works closely with professors in supervising undergraduate work and in consultation regarding his project, yet these relationships are limited by course and thesis requirements.

Tennis squad shows well at Laval tourney

by LAWRENCE HAIMOVITCH

The annual OQAA Tennis Tournament took place at Laval on October 10, 11, and 12 and one would have thought it was scheduled two months late. High winds, freezing temperatures, and driving rain marred play as the Laval squad copped all the honours, taking both the team, singles and doubles matches.

Laval's winning total was 30 points with the U of M. not far back with 26 points. McGill's hopefuls followed with 23 pts, and Toronto was right on McGill's tail with 22 points. McMaster, Western, and Windsor brought up the rear with scores of 13, 7, and 5 respectively.

Cutts pleased

Coach Stan Cutts was well pleased with his team's performance and felt they probably would have won the tourney if captain Steve Chandler had been able to play. Due to Chandler's absence, John Tibbits had to be elevated to the number one spot and thus face tougher competition. He won 2 of 6 matches but Coach Cutts pointed out that a couple of matches were very close and could have gone either way. Tom Gavin, a rookie to OQAA meets played well and was victorious in 5 of 6 sets. Iftikhar Hosain also acquitted himself very well by winning 4-6 sets while scrappy Dave Brandt also put on a fine exhibition in winning 5-6 sets also.

Laval's squad proved strong as they took all the marbles. Led by J. Trudel who won the individual crown and André Côté, who joined with Trudel, to sweep the doubles, Laval's entry was one of the strongest ever seen in OQAA meets.

For Coach Stan Cutts it marked the end of another tennis meet and it brought both satisfaction and disappointment. The emergence of Gavin, Hosain and Brandt certainly augurs well for next year while the resignation of Steve Chandler surely must rank as great crusher for Cutts and all those concerned with the progress of the tennis team.

Polo season under way

by BUNK ROBERTSON

A new season of waterpolo gets under way tonight at 7:30 in the War Memorial pool as last year's champion McGill Redmen meet the Palestre Nationale team.

McGill will be striving to retain the league title of the Ottawa St. Lawrence Intercollegiate Athletic Association which they won last year with a record of eight wins, one loss, and one tie.

The East End Boys' Club was the only team to beat the Redmen in the OSLIAA (played last year under the name of Concordia). They have handed McGill two consecutive defeats in exhibition play in the past two weeks.

However, tonight is the night when the hours of pre-season practice and exhibition games are put to the test and the Red and White team is confident of victory in their first start. Veterans Sonny Belenkie and John Warren are expected to be back in the line-up tonight and the Nationale squad should be ready for a formidable onslaught from the starting whistle.
